The Developmental Clinic

The Developmental Clinic at Penn Highlands DuBois is dedicated to evaluating infants at birth and up to 2 years of age at risk for developmental milestone delays, or who have developmental concerns. Our goal is for every baby or child to reach his or her highest potential.

A comprehensive diagnostic evaluation is conducted by a multi-disciplinary team. The team includes a neonatologist, nurse, physical therapist, and a speech-language pathologist.

Diagnostic evaluation performed by the clinic includes standardized developmental assessments: a speech-language assessment, a physical and neurodevelopmental exam, and a parent interview. The team evaluates how your baby or child moves, interacts, and responds to sound and direction. The diagnostic evaluation helps to determine if your baby or child is reaching the developmental milestones for his or her age.

The Developmental team works with the baby or child that has a delay by providing families with the best treatment options for each baby and child.

Referrals to other specialists are made as needed.

The neonatologist will address any medical concerns related to developmental concerns and make referrals as needed.

Babies and children may experience delays in development at any time during the first 2 years. If you have a concern about your baby or child meeting his or her developmental milestones we are happy to do an evaluation. Babies and children during the first 2 years can be referred to the Developmental Clinic at Penn Highlands DuBois by their physician.
